

This diagram is a basic outline for the database. This is by no means complete, but the main structure is there. The 'figure' table is there per research conducted by Microsoft regarding saving images in databases vs storing absolute file references. The 'account_type_permissions' table is not complete at all. New permissions will almost certainly be added as the site is being developed.

All data for the 'school' table came from:

 When at all possible, it is best to validate and limit freely entered user information especially when it is important to know which schools are using the site.
